

BOGUS CRACKDOWN ON MIGRANTS

Tory immigration crackdown?

A general election must be on the way!

THE TORY GOVERNMENT is once again employing the strategy it has adopted in umpteen elections over the last nearly forty years. With an election not far over the horizon, and the polls showing a complete collapse in support, the Conservatives are going for yet another bogus immigration crackdown.

In 1962 the Tory Government passed the Commonwealth Immigration Bill, which claimed to restrict immigration to those with jobs to come to, and a small additional quota. The flood inwards continued as it has done ever since, and despite umpteen more claims to be 'stopping immigration', or the ever popular 'immigration reduced to a trickle'.

New laws are meaningless without enforcement, and there is no intention to enforce immigration law - except for small scale publicity stunts. If immigration law is strictly enforced, as the Government claims, then how is it that there are something upwards of one million illegals in Britain? How is it that only a few thousand are repatriated each year?

The latest scam is Home Secretary Michael Howard's 'tough curbs' on bogus asylum seekers, and fines for employers who take on illegal immigrants. Who does Mr. Howard think he is kidding? There are already laws against employing people without the proper social security and tax procedures. There have been roundups at places of work - even Government buildings.

How many prosecutions have taken place? Have there been any? The Crown Prosecution Service regards it as 'not in public interest' to take action concerning illegal immigrants. The Tories are simply once again 'playing the race card' - defined as pretending to stop immigration.

● The quality of the Government's determination to crack-down on illegal immigrants may be judged from the case of illegal Steve Oboagye (pictured). Despite being subject to a deportation order, he is a fully paid-up member of Hornsey & Wood Green Conservatives!

Oboagye, 64, has also taken thousands in state handouts. He came to Britain on a six month visitors visa in 1985. He then used false names to get jobs. He lives in Muswell Hill, and gets income support and housing benefit. The illegal immigrant has been praised by the Tories for his loyalty and hard work.

Labour Councillor's wife was a prostitute

'Labour will do nothing for people in Limehouse' says resignation statement

AN EAST END COUNCILLOR has resigned following the exposure of his wife as a prostitute. John Ryan, 46, saw his wife in the street touting for trade - after he had headed a drive against local prostitution.

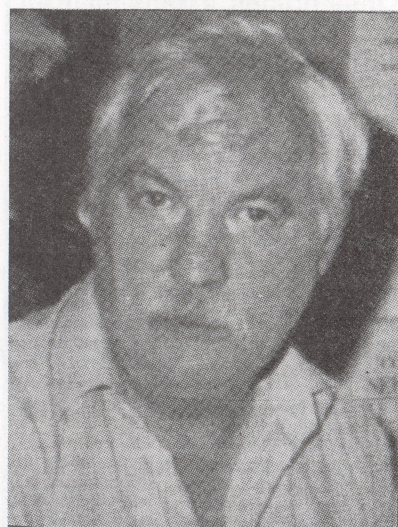

Ryan says he was forced to resign. His wife is said to have charged extra "because she was a councillor's wife." He was vice-chairman of the Arts, Sports, and Leisure Committee, one of whose initiatives was a campaign to clear prostitutes off the streets.

The former councillor for Limehouse was in the Ten Bells public house in Commercial Street when he saw his wife Gillian getting into a car with a stranger. He was taunted in the street about his wife's activities.

Ryan says he was drunk when he signed the resignation papers, and that he was thrown out by New Labour. He says "New Labour are middle-class. They'll do nothing for people in Limehouse."

The resignation illustrates the real position of 'New' Labour, and the quality of the active members they are able to get. Sad Ryan, however, deserves full credit for telling the truth about his party. Labour in the East End has little to do with local people. Immigrants are the block vote they want and are willing to pay for in the form of endless grants and privileges.

The BNP is standing Gordon Callow as its candidate in the forthcoming by-election on November 9.

'A WELL-GROUNDED FEAR OF PERSECUTION'

The Tory Government is once again playing the 'race card' - as it has done for decades when in political difficulties.

A film about US politics once showed a mayor saying to aides 'Let's go and jerk them off' as he emerged from a town hall to face the public. The Tories are once again trying to 'jerk off' the public with their endless tall tales about stopping immigration.

The whole farcical plot is completed by liberal hand wringing about the evils of blocking entry to 'refugees'.

What is a refugee? There is a legal definition. Refugees are those fleeing their own countries because of a 'well-grounded fear of persecution'.

Even the liberal Home Office - which will bend over backwards to legitimise immigrants - has found that only about 5% of those seeking refugee status in Britain have a case under this definition.

Nearly all the others are, of course, allowed to stay anyway - one way or another.

Ironically, there is a large group of people in Britain who, on the international definition, have a cast iron case for claiming refugee status. They are, of course, British nationalists, and, indeed, many who would not go so far and merely describe themselves as patriots.

Leading nationalists in Britain regularly suffer a catalogue of persecutions including fire bombings and wreckings of their homes, tying up and beatings with iron bars in their homes, expulsion from jobs, demonstrations outside their homes and places of work, death threats, attacks in the street by gangs laden with weapons, arrests on trumped up charges, and poisonous and untruthful media campaigns against them.

All this happens to people who merely and lawfully express doubts about the prevailing orthodoxy of political ideas in our country.

Most people have no idea any of this is even happening, and still fondly imagine that Britain is bastion of liberty. The controlled media will certainly not draw too much attention to the realities.

Anyone coming from abroad, who could truthfully point to such an experience in another country, would certainly be granted refugee status here.

A Yugoslav recently told the BNP how shocked he was to discover what really happens in British politics. Until the commencement of the civil war, he said, Yugoslavia had been far less prone to this sort of thing than Britain for many years.

It is high time for a spirit of genuine democracy to be introduced into our country. This is an agenda on which most genuine people in Britain - left or right - can all agree.

'RACKET' OF COMMISSION FOR RACIAL EQUALITY

Law Society boss in race payouts storm...

THE NEW PRESIDENT of the solicitor's governing body, the Law Society, has hit out at the 'racket' of huge race payouts. Martin Mears says that the legal system has been 'hijacked by the discrimination industry'. In his debut Law Society conference speech Mr. Mears ridiculed the £30,000 Industrial Tribunal award to Belfast-born lecturer Alan Bryans, who claimed 'racial discrimination' after being called an 'Irish prat' in his college staffroom.

Mr. Bryans' claim was backed by the Commission for Racial Equality. Mr. Mears said it was time to consider whether the CRE and the Equal Opportunities Commission were 'a public nuisance'.

"Have they outlived their usefulness" Mr. Mears said, and referred to the costs of 'preposterous applications' like that of Mr. Bryans'. The legal fees alone have come to £100,000.

Bryans has failed to return to work, despite an agreement to do so. The CRE says he is suffering from stress, and his employer, Northumberland College, now believes he intends to resign and claim constructive dismissal on race grounds.

If successful he would be in line for a £330,000 compensation package. While Bryans was on sick leave from his college, he taught part-time elsewhere, saying his doctor believed it would be therapeutic.

The award to Bryans has caused widespread anger - not least because of the pitifully small payments to victims of violence in Britain.

NICE LITTLE EARNER! £30,000 for lecturer who was called an 'Irish prat'. Alan Bryans, pictured with wife Patricia, could now be in line for a further £330,000 after failing to return to work. He says he is suffering from a stress-related illness. He worked part time at another college while on sick leave.

Lies, damn lies, and statistics!

Government crime figures scam

CRIMINOLOGISTS say that the Government's trumpeted fall in crime is a sham. What the Home Secretary, Michael Howard, has actually said is that 'recorded crime' has fallen.

The actual number of crimes committed is far higher, and it only needs a small drop in the reporting of offences for an impression to be given which is quite contrary to the truth.

The proportion of the population which is between 10 and 20 years-old - a peak age for some crimes - has also fallen, giving a misleading impression of a falling willingness to break the law.

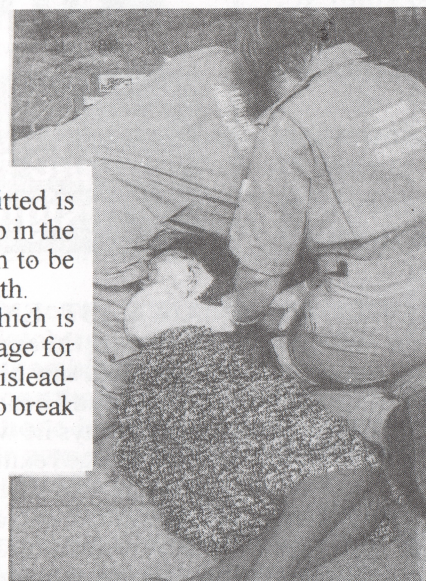

Since 1992 falls in crime have been greatest in car offences, vandalism, robbery, and theft. They tend to be youth crimes, and there are now 17% less persons in the relevant age group. Crime by the over-21s has not dropped at all.

An indication of the gap between what the police figures say, and the realities, is demonstrated by the the 1992/93 results. Police figures showed a 5% increase in crime - but the British Crime Survey showed a massive 20% rise! The British Crime Survey figures are obtained by asking the public its experience of offences.

Much crime is reported only for the purposes of an insurance claim. There is little expectation that anyone will be caught. The increasing costs of insurance alone has driven many people out of the market for cover in recent years.

Costs have rocketed in crime prone areas. Thus many crimes now go unreported in the very areas which suffer most from lawlessness.

The Association of Chief Police

Paramedics attend a Muslim lady hit by a stray bullet at a Brixton bus stop

Officers has urged caution in looking at Government claims. Pressure for results has led to ingenious ways in which the recording of crimes is avoided by the police.

Parts of the inner cities are becoming increasingly dangerous from the use of guns and 'gun culture'. In Coldharbour Lane, Brixton, recently a Muslim woman (pictured), who happened to be standing at a bus stop, was hit in the face by a stray bullet.

A gunman pulled a handgun after a street row believed to be racial in nature. A bullet grazed the woman's face. A detective said "It's incredible. These people just don't care."

Police said the gunman was black, aged 30, 5' 10" and stocky.

Lottery loads money for immigrants

THE NATIONAL LOTTERY Charities Board, which distributes 20% of the proceeds of the national lottery, has provoked national rage with its 'politically correct' handouts.

Among the beneficiaries were:-

Vietnamese Mental Health Project - £174,130

Somali Mental Health Project - £183,207

Eritrean Information Centre - £90,000

Gloucester Chinese Women's Guild - £29,000

The Eritrean organisation, based in helps immigrants claim benefits, and obtain permanent entry to Britain. When an application for money to establish a Falklands War Museum was made recently, it was turned down.

The committee in charge of distributing the cash is the Charities Board, whose chairman is David Sieff. Mr. Sieff is a governor of the Weizman Institute of Science, and of the Shenkar College of Textile Technology - both in Israel.

Mr. Sieff's father is Baron Sieff, who until recently was chairman of the Bank of Israel Financial Trust. During the 1980s he received the Gold Medal for Humanitarianism from the notorious Jewish pressure group B'nai B'rith.

David Mellor MP climbed on the media wagon with an attack on the Charities Board, calling it a "creaky old tub full of the usual political correctness suspects, who act like a progressive Labour council."

Another group which received a huge payout was the Strathclyde Poverty Alliance, which has been described as a left-wing political pressure group. It got £666,177.

Yet another was the Phoenix Toy Library in Swindon which got £500 to buy 'multicultural and equal opportunity toys'.

Tories hitting cash buffers

Branch donates £17 as top firms quit

TWO MORE top firms have axed their contributions to the Tory Party. The car parts giant Lucas, and the car distributor Inchcape have stopped their donations of £25,000 and £40,000. Branch donations have also collapsed. Woodspring Tories in Avon were the worst in their area. They sent a magnificent £17 to Central Office!

The two companies have now joined a growing list of blue-chip firms to have abandoned the Conservatives. Others are on the way. Stock brokers Smith New Court are reviewing their £10,000 donation, and Rolls Royce and Trafalgar House are reviewing their position.

Other Tory loyalists have said they will not increase their gifts in election year. Business is concerned at growing Tory posturing about the EC. Already this year Whitbread, Glaxo, Rank, and United Biscuits (£130,000) have quit.

The Tories have at present an £11.4m. overdraft, and worse, business is beginning to look towards Labour. Penguin Books have given £25,000 already. Tate & Lyle have cut support to the Tories from £25,000 to £15,000, and also given money to Labour.

The Tories have not been helped by the poor economy - some areas like construction are still in deep recession. Big business wants the single market within the EC.

Hundreds of constituency parties have failed to meet the 'target quotas' for contributions set by Conservative Central Office each year. Woodspring said they need all the money they raise to run the local office - and pay an agent's salary.

LUCAS DUMP TORIES: Chairman Sir Brian Pearce axes £25,000 sub

The top fund raiser in the Avon area was Bristol West which sent less than half their target figure of £3,400. Bristol South and East together raised only £300.

The horror story for the Tories goes on and on in the Avon area, which is far from atypical. Kingswood raised £250 out of £3,500, similar to many others. 500 nationwide have failed to pay up the full quota, with a dozen giving nothing at all.

From a big business viewpoint the Tories have outlived their usefulness. Big firms have no fixed loyalty to any country. The Tories have encouraged this situation, and are now hoisted on a petard at least partly of their own making.

Cheeky little sod!

Swindled benefits - while working for DSS fraud team

A LEADING MEMBER of the Tyneside Bangladeshi community has been caught swindling benefits - while working to expose DSS fraud. Shah Amin (pictured) was an interpreter on a DSS crack-down on Indian restaurant fraud. He also earnt up to £48 an hour translating suspect statements for police investigating a local murder. Mother-of-three Amina Khatun was horrifically stabbed to death in Washington, leading to a major murder investigation.

Amin failed to declare his earnings when signing on for £180 per week benefits. The father-of-six says he forgot. The revelations have sent shockwaves through the 2,000 strong Bangladeshi community on Tyneside. Amin is a former president of the South Tyneside Bangladeshi Association, and once tried to become a magistrate.

MISLED

The highly respected community leader admitted "This will bring shame on my family. I have worked hard for the Bangladeshi community". An investigation by a local newspaper has found that 56-year-old Amin has also misled the DSS concerning his earnings from a restaurant he runs.

A well known local restaurant boss, he went bankrupt in 1990 with debts of £20,000. He now runs the Raj Dulal Balti House in Victoria Road West, Hebburn, but has put it in the name of his 20-year-old son Dulal.

Amin told the DSS that he worked for two hours a day in the large restaurant for £35 a week. This allows him to claim £130 a week in benefits for his wife and family, plus £50 a week for his mortgage. In reality he is the boss.

BLITZ

The dole crackdown on which Amin worked has saved a staggering £3 million already on South Tyneside. The initiative in South Shields and Jarrow was part of a nationwide blitz which has saved £92m.

Dole fraud is believed to cost Britain £1.4 billion-a-year - £140 for every family in the country - or enough to fund very substantial repatriation grants for hundreds of thousands of immigrants every year. On top of this figure enormous sums are paid quite legally to the endless flood of immigrants who have no means of support when they come here.

As one angry taxpayer in London said as he sent off a cheque for £10,000 in income tax: "There goes a year's housing benefit for a Nigerian student."

'THIS WILL BRING SHAME ON MY FAMILY'. Leading member of the Bangladeshi community Shah Amin 'forgot' to declare earnings while working as an interpreter for dole swindle investigators - and for the police on a Tyneside murder enquiry.

East End bank forced into closure by raids

BARCLAYS BANK in Bethnal Green has been forced into permanent closure following a series of raids which have left staff in a state of terror. The branch is only 200 yards from a police station, but suffered three armed robberies within seven days recently.

The closure of the bank in Bethnal Green Road has left customers in a position of travelling to Barclay's branch in Commercial Road. They say that exposes them to a range of new threats.

Barclays were clearly embarrassed by their failure to keep the Bethnal Green Road open, but say their prime concern is the safety of customers.

Scotland Yard say armed crime is decreasing in London, but clearly the criminals are, in fact, winning. The Flying Squad are based only a mile away at Tower Bridge, but have been unable to intercept the raids.

The closed branch was Barclay's prime site in the area. They say armed robberies are becoming a 'serious and worrying problem'.

● In an indication of the spreading effects of violent crime, North London's Kentish Town has been named by police as the 'murder capital of London'. Kentish Town was traditionally a quiet area away from recognised centres of disorder like King's Cross and Brixton.

Michael Dooher suspect flees country

A SUSPECT wanted by police for questioning about the murder of 19-year-old Michael Dooher has fled the country say police.

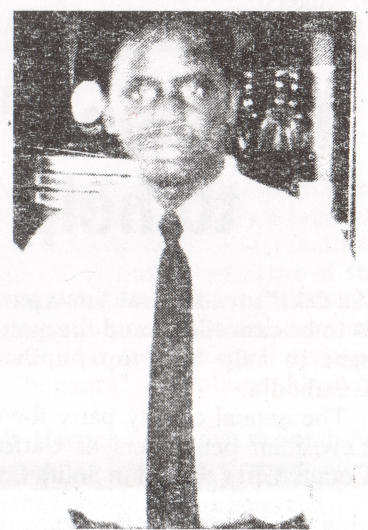

Mr. Dooher was beaten to death by a gang in Lichfield during September - as reported in October's BN. Police at the time said they were hunting three Asians.

Police say they believe that a second unnamed suspect has gone into hiding in Pakistan. Mushtaq Khan, 25, has already been charged with murder.

Detective Superintendent Joseph Salt, of Staffordshire Police, said during the inquest on Mr. Dooher's death that it was very unlikely that the hunted man would return to Britain.

There have been no protest demonstrations by 'anti-racist' groups following Michael Dooher's death. When a black person is killed by whites it is a different story.

Have you seen this man ask police?

POLICE are appealing for information on the whereabouts of this man, who is wanted for questioning concerning sexual offences against a 12-year-old girl. Leonard Nzebo, 29, disappeared after visiting the girl's Peckham home.

BN CURRYWATCH

'Sorry Sir - No Hairbrush Curry Tonight'

BN's Curry Watchers were hoping to make a pilgrimage to Scotland this month - to enjoy 'Hairbrush Curry' at the Ashoka Tandoori in Livingston's Crofthead Centre.

Sadly the pilgrimage was not to be. The Ashoka had been closed by the local council who are no friends to the seeker of rare curry experiences. All that remained was for the sheriff of Linlithgow Court to hear reports, before sentencing restaurant boss Mohammed Iqbal (35), who had pleaded guilty to 17 hygiene offences.

The premises were shut after a member of the public - clearly no genuine curry connoisseur - had complained to the council. A subsequent inspection by health officers had revealed among other things:

- A hairbrush matted with dead hair on a shelf with sauces
- Insects landing on the food
- Mould on yoghurt
- Staff aprons ingrained with grease and old food

An outside firm had been called in to clean up the premises, and new equipment bought. The Ashoka had now re-opened, and Mr. Iqbal was said to be very aware of his obligations.

'Sorry Sir - No rat dropping curry tonight'

More disappointment has hit true curry fans in Norfolk. The Megna Tandoori in Dereham was closed by magistrates a few weeks ago. Health officers had found the whole place, including the ceiling, covered in grease - and rat droppings in the food store. "There was black grease all over the place" said health officer Iain Green. The owner John Uddin was said to have had difficulty cleaning up since the water had been cut off for non-payment of Anglian Water's bill!

Bon appetit!

Algerian bomb threat grows

ARMED POLICE have been put on alert to guard the Channel Tunnel against Islamic bombers from Algeria. The head of MI5, Stella Rimington, has warned of the risk from terrorist groups of which little is known in the UK. Protection for potential French targets in Britain has been stepped up - with very overt policing outside the French Embassy in London's Knightsbridge.

Bombings on the Paris Metro have become a regular occurrence - and the Islamic fundamentalists may wish to stage a spectacular in Britain. The Algerian terrorists have called for France to become a Muslim country.

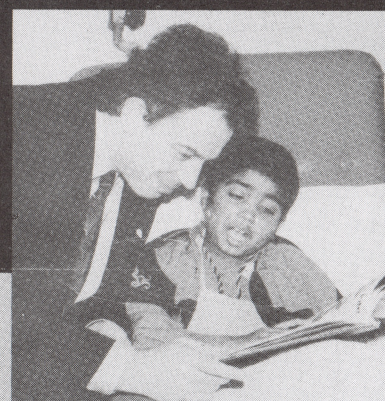

France is now beginning to reap the consequences of the policy of admitting millions of North Africans.

If the French Government continues to support the present Algerian Government, they attract terrorism from Islamic groups who wish to turn Algeria into a fundamentalist state.

If they support the fundamentalists, who then take power, there will be a mass exodus from Algeria - mostly into France - which liberal politicians will be unable to stop. The scenario resembles the plot of Jean Raspail's novel The Camp of the Saints.

Either way the warnings given by Jean-Marie Le Pen are on the way to fulfillment.

NUFF SAID!

Four million anglers now targets of Animal Liberation Front terror campaign

Animal fanatics attack OAP's

Anti-terrorist police say they were among the first victims of a new terror campaign against Britain's four million anglers.

A hired mini-bus with twelve men and women in it descended on the three OAPs. They assaulted Stan Gardner, and smirked as they broke the anglers' rods.

Cumbria Police say it is the first attack on anglers in their area. The three victims were left shaken. Mr. Irving, who survived six years of war as a gunnery officer, said that it was a terrible thing to do. "Stan is 84 and could have had a heart attack being roughly handled like that" he said.

A widespread police hunt has been launched, and anglers have been warned to be on their guard.

The Animal Liberation Front has announced that a group calling itself 'The Justice Department' sent the bomb to the BNP's Welling shop in 1994.

The bomb badly injured Alfred Waite, who was lucky to escape with his life. ALF claim that the Justice Department is nothing to do with them.

BN says that the BNP has no particular policy on animal welfare. Many members are animal lovers, like most Britons. An article on the party's Internet site criticises ritual killing by Jews and Muslims. The fact that a bomb was sent to the BNP reflects the fact that extremist animal groups are largely left wing organisations with little real interest in animals.

The attack on the OAPS was carried out by psychopaths who simply enjoy violence - particularly of the most cowardly kind like beating up old people, and sending parcel bombs.

●A report on the Internet says that a hunt saboteur's home in Kettering has been fire bombed twice in recent weeks, leaving the family terrified.

ANOTHER RACE MIX MARRIAGE TRAGEDY

POLICE have called on a Moroccan to come forward following the murder in Islington of three generations of a family.

37-year-old Brahim Aberdour's wife Sophia, and his baby daughter, were found dead at the wife's family home, together with both Sophia's parents.

All four had been stabbed say police, who found the bodies at Dagmar Terrace after a cut-off 999 call.

Police have alerted ports to look out for Mr. Aberdour, but would not say if he was a suspect.

The marriage had a history of violence, with neighbours reporting frequent rows. The dead baby was 16-months-old. The dead parents, Vivien (57) and John Trant (71), are said to have strong doubts about the wisdom of their daughter marrying a Muslim.

NUNEATON VIOLENCE

TWO nights of disturbances have hit Nuneaton, with 50 Asian youths stoning a bail hostel. The trouble began after a fight between an Asian teenager and a white youth.

Warwickshire police brought in reinforcements to deal with the trouble in the Edward Street area.

One local woman discounted later claims of a lowered temperature in the area. "Tension is still high" she said. The Asians are demanding closure of the bail hostel and DSS bedsit.

ASSAULT TRIAL CANCELLED

AN ISLEWORTH Crown Court judge cancelled the trial of 14 Asians charged with assault - saying that media publicity had made it impossible to give a fair trial.

Following disturbances near Brick Lane in London in 1993, weeks of vicious media coverage effectively found charged BNP members guilty before trial - but it still went on.

Pensioner's Xmas axed to help Cambodia

An OAP's traditional Xmas party is to be cancelled - and the money sent to help hard up pupils in Cambodia.

The annual charity party for 60 Lewisham pensioners at Catford County Girl's School in South London has been a much loved event for both OAPs and school kids.

The new head teacher Sue O'Neill plans to replace the event with a charity day to raise funds for Cambodia, where a former colleague is working.

Pupils at the school, who looked forward to serving the pensioners at table, are angry. One 15-year-old said "Everyone at the school is outraged. The pensioners' party should not be cancelled."

A spokeswoman for Lewisham Pensioners' Link said: "They will be bitterly disappointed." She said that some OAPs would be without an Xmas nosh-up because its own party for 100 was full.

Lewisham Council said it was up to the school to decide whether the party was cancelled. BN says that until people in Britain wake up and get rid of the lefties who control the country this sort of caper will go on.

Anger as Japs trash London War Memorial

THE NEW Japanese owners of London's disused County Hall have removed a memorial to council workers who lost their lives during the Second World War.

Despite the building being listed, the Shirayama Corporation has removed the granite memorial slab.

The memorial has been the subject of dispute since the Japanese bought the building in 1992, at a cost of £60m., for conversion to a hotel. The new owners refused access to lay wreaths and hold a VJ service.

The Government is giving the Japs

28 days to restore the memorial - face criminal charges. British Legion GLC Branch Chairman Bert Reeves said it was time Shirayama was taken to court. Lambeth's Lib Dem leader Mike Tuffrey said "Shirayama has desecrated our memorial."

County Hall became vacant when the loony-left Greater London Council was abolished during the 1980s.

BN says the affair has exposed all the post war liberal clap trap about universal brotherhood. The building should never have been sold to foreigners.

TO THE POINT

Oddly, black Labour councillor Mavis Lambie was one of those most eager to welcome Haringey Council's five-year bid "to have removed the public conception of Haringey as an 'extreme' council".

Odd, because she was recently quoted making "extreme" comments at a public meeting. "When I came to this country in the Fifties, it was on its knees," she claimed. "The people didn't know how to dress, how to eat, or how to do anything."

At this point six white people got up and left - with former Tory councillor Ron Aitken declaring "I found it completely offensive." Will Stewart - Daily Express October 2 1995

As an American living in London I was greatly looking forward to meeting General Colin Powell (retired), at Hatchards bookstore, when he was signing his autobiography last Monday.

After queuing for more than an hour I was disappointed to find that only a signature was on offer, and that he would not be making any personal dedications.

Well, at least I would get to meet the great man. Mr. Powell ignored my outstretched hand, offered in friendship and respect. Still determined, I asked if he would answer a question. When he said yes, I enquired about his views on the care and treatment of allied service personnel injured in the Gulf War. To my horror I was then threatened physically by his security staff and evicted from the building.

Surely a man who aspires to the presidency of the United States is able to answer a question from a member of the public, or what chance will he have in the cut and thrust of the political world?

Letter from Mr. A. Tucker in London Evening Standard

Meanwhile the forces feeding nationalism elsewhere, particularly the failure of parties rooted in ideology and class to deliver sufficient prosperity and security, will be strengthening in England as in Europe.

Might English nationalism not be a front on which the left might change an outworn attitude before change is thrust upon it? The expression of cultural identity is not something that need be considered the property of the right.

Is it not patronising to support the aspiration to nationhood of peoples overseas while somehow implying that we English can manage without such a thing ourselves?

English socialists seem to have few problems with African, Kurdish, Timorese, or Irish nationalism. If democratic parties cold-shoulder nationalist feeling, others will be more welcoming.

HUGE NEW EAST LONDON MOSQUE

A HUGE NEW MOSQUE is to be built in East London's Beckton. A scheme proposed by local Muslims is now to go to Newham Council for planning consent, and to negotiate the purchase of a site.

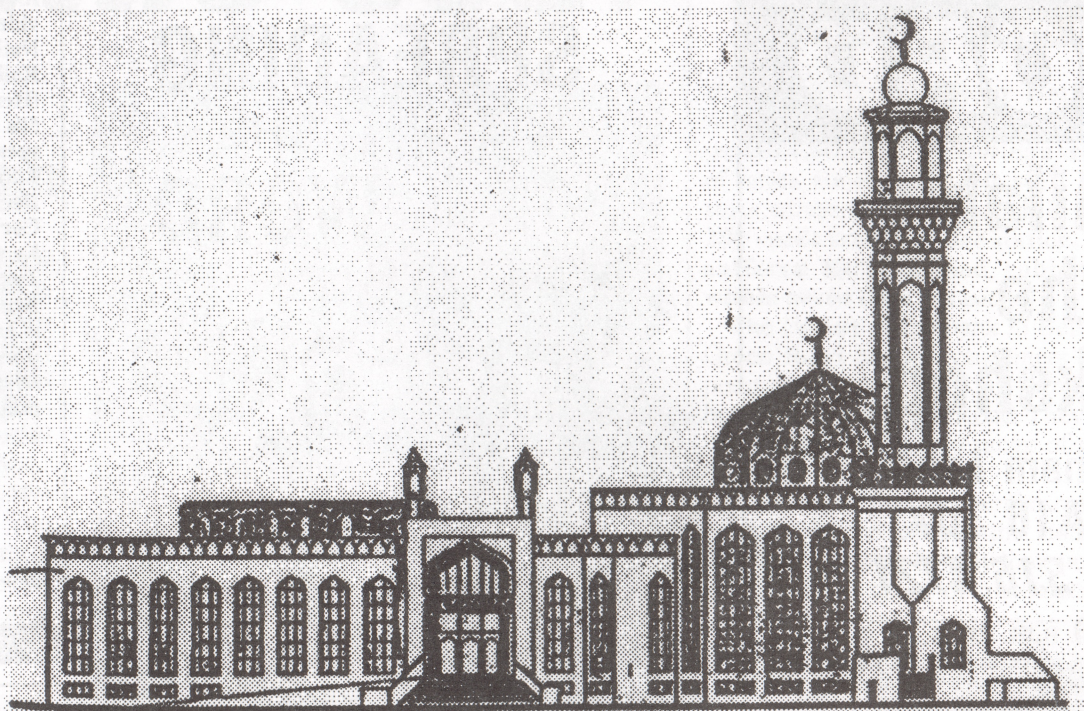

The Beckton Mosque, (pictured) costing up to £3m., will be constructed next to Tollgate Health Centre, and will cover Canning Town, Custom House, North Woolwich, Silvertown, East Ham, as well as Beckton.

The 100ft. tall minaret will dominate the local skyline, but assurances have been given that the 'call to prayer' would not be made from the top. The proposal document says that the mosque will 'foster mutual understanding and break through barriers which divide the world'.

There will be extensive cultural facilities, as well as a large number of parking spaces, flats and a mortuary. The centre aims to take an active part in local community affairs.

The new mosque follows shortly after the construction of a huge Hindu Temple in North London - fostering further racial harmony in that area.

Soon the skyline of the whole of London will be dominated by huge oriental temples - no doubt bringing in a new sense of harmony for all white folk who were never even asked whether they wanted millions from the Asian sub-continent to come here.

BECKTON MOSQUE: The new building will have a 100ft. minaret, dominating the local skyline.

BN BRIEFING

Michael Heseltine's little joke at the Tory Conference about Labour marching left, left, left seems a little thin. The pot calling the kettle black in fact - if such an expression is not too 'politically incorrect' for readers.

Major has now moved the Tories so far to the left that the new head of the Conservative Party Research Department is one Daniel Finkelstein. Mr. Finkelstein is a former member of both the SDP, and the Labour Party.

SCANDAL!

A reception for female delegates at the recent Labour Conference was graced by an African lady in full colourful African costume. It was the first time that this ambassadress of our multi-cultural society had attended a Labour Conference.

In the spirit of harmony she approached a group of delegates to introduce herself. Unhappily she was told: "You don't belong here. Go and sit with your own people."

A full-scale enquiry is thought to be under way. BN offers its very sincere condolences to Labour for what a newspaper described as a 'horrible and shocking episode'.

RACIST BEGGARS

Recent research in Africa shows just how far we still have to go in building the new multi-racial, 'multi-cultural, world'. A visiting consultant at the University of Botswana says that African beggars practise racial discrimination. "They are not equal opportunity beggars" complains Michael Herrick.

Mr. Herrick found that in South Africa beggars leave black people alone when they see them stepping out of Mercedes or BMW cars. They know they will get naught.

In Botswana, Mr. Herrick has noticed that a local beggar makes regular rounds of white residents, but skips the home of wealthy blacks.

All too many African leaders, says the consultant: "Leave their money in Switzerland rather than their national development banks."

Roll on the day when all the world's mendicants are fully accredited 'equal opportunity beggars'.

'RACIST ATTACK'

It is high time all of us in Britain followed the pioneering example of 'anti-racist' groups in describing anything we do not like as a 'racist attack'.

If Asian cab drivers can describe Government plans for English tests (July BN) as a 'racist attack', then surely equality demands that all of us should do the same.

BN therefore commends the example set by the Welsh broadcasters union Bectu in calling a Radio Times article a 'racist attack'. The article described Welshness as a 'bizarre ethnic idea as seen in Bosnia'. Remarks were also made about Druidic robes. Bectu is threatening to call in the Commission for Racial Equality.

All of us see things we do not like in the newspapers attacking white people and our country. Every one a racial attack on the definition used by 'anti-racism'. Let's get our share!

Welsh action group Citizens of Gwynedd has received legal advice that the Commission for Racial Equality had exceeded its powers by intervening in a proposal to appoint Welsh speakers to Caernarfonshire Council.

The CRE was acting on behalf of extreme-left wing trade union Unison. A CRE spokesman said "We are not going in with big boots stamping on people's rights." That's a good one from the people who tried to stop the extradition of the evil killer of Catherine Ayling, Curtis Howard!

Nice to see the bully-boys of both organisations getting a bloody nose!

WHEN childminder Olivia Laidler saw a council funded women's advice bus she hopped on - only to fall foul of the 'political correctness' police.

Olivia, 42, (pictured) got on the double-decker, funded by Labour controlled North Tyneside Council, to collect leaflets on child-care and female health. The bus had a window sticker saying all women were welcome.

She was confronted by three staff - two of them white - who told her to gerroff. Olivia had boarded the bus with a friend while it was parked in a supermarket car park.

She says "I got on with a female friend because it was advertising issues of interest to me."

"It described itself as a 'women's bus' but as soon as we got on board the two white women went for us and got quite aggressive. They said the bus was just there for black people and Chinese women," said Mrs. Laidler. The staff tore off the window sticker when she pointed to it.

A spokesman for the council said later that the bus was for women from ethnic minorities.

Mrs. Laidler has made a formal complaint to the council. "It was their attitude that made me really angry" she says "They were so loony-left."

Plain tales of life in Britain

Gallery evacuated as 'sculpture' leaks poison

LONDON'S Tate Gallery was evacuated recently after a poisonous substance began to leak from a 'sculpture'. Firemen were called in when attendants found iodine leaking from Hamad Butt's Substance Sublimation Unit. The work of art consists of a glass and metal ladder containing heated iodine crystals.

Other works by Mr. Butt, who died last year of AIDS, are also on display in the gallery. They contain poisonous bromine and chlorine. Health hazards have become a feature of many recent works of modern art.

The Tate plans an international conference on works composed of food which is past its sell-by date. The late Andy Warhol made one of his most famous works out of tins of Campbell's Soup. The Campbell company has advised that the art work is probably 'reeking with botulism', and should be 'got rid of, put in the trash'.

Lynda Zycherman, of the Museum of Modern Art in New York, says that the more she tried to explain to the company that the tins were art 'the stupider they thought I was'.

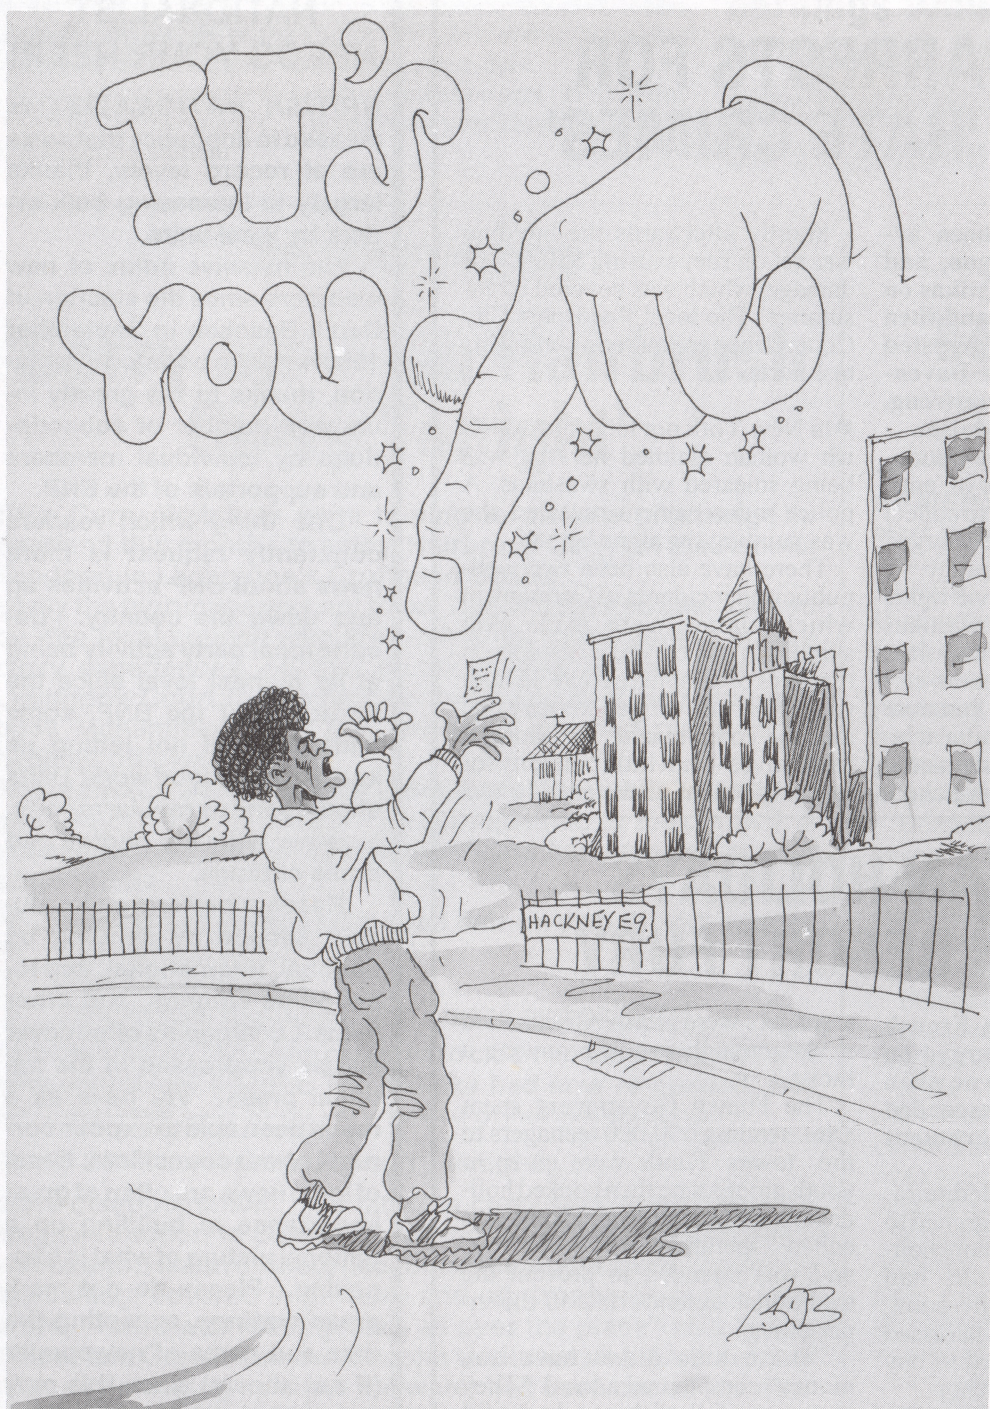

A recent 'sculpture' consisted of a dead cow in a tank, with a device to simulate movement inside it as it rotted. Public health authorities said that it might explode or cause visitors to vomit.

London is currently not only hosting Mr. Butt's sculptures, but also a new exhibition of works by the distinguished artists Gilbert & George. G & G are a touch on the 'gay' side.

The pictures, at the South London Gallery, consist essentially of portrayals of men defecating - but let a progressive magazine, Time Out, describe the show in its own inimitable manner: -

"What you get is serious body of work about prejudice, especially homophobia. In 'Carrier' the pair appear unclad against a backdrop of city gents. Our prejudices single them out as potential carriers of HIV. In 'B*m H*s' we are invited to scrutinise the central target of homophobic abuse. Think 'fudgepackers' 'chocolate dippers' etc. If this work incenses, it is because we are confronted with an image upon which to project our deepest fears'.

Remember to take your fattest cheque book to the show. Works by 'artists' of Gilbert & George's stature don't come cheap!

BNP BANNED AGAIN!

Southampton University blocks visit - but welcome at US London campus

AN INVITATION for the BNP to speak at Southampton University's Debating Union was blocked by the University authorities - to the evident dissatisfaction of the president of the union, who is Asian.

BNP National Press Officer Michael Newland was booked to speak during October, but a few days before date agreed the university invoked what were described as 'rarely used powers' to bar the party. British Universities are, in fact, under a legal obligation to uphold freedom of speech. The customary excuses were used. (local Daily Echo press coverage below)

It is a sad comment on the state of the country that it requires an Asian to attempt to uphold open debate on vital national matters, and full credit extends to him.

Also in October, an invitation for Mr. Newland to speak at the London campus of the US Grinnell College went without a hitch - and is thought to have been the first time in decades that a spokesman for the 'right' has spoken at any university in the UK.

Mr. Newland spoke to about 25 students taking a course on multiracialism. Questioning was brisk, but good humoured. The invitation came from a black academic, Dr. Kesho Scott, to whom the BNP extends its thanks.

University bans BNP debate over fears of violence

SOUTHAMPTON University has blocked a debate involving the British National Party because of fears it would lead to violence and disorder. A spokesman at the BNP's headquarters claimed the decision was politically motivated.

Exclusive by James Chapman debating society had invited a speaker from the party - known for its extreme nationalist views - to a meeting next month.

"We daily deny the decision was politically motivated. It would be unlawful for the university to permit such a meeting to go ahead."

hate on all kinds of issues. They say they are protecting law and order but that is just an excuse. It is a complete disgrace."

INTERNET NEWS

The BNP's Web Site has now been expanded with a new library section of recent articles from nationalist periodicals - mainly Spearhead. The BN news section has also been enlarged for October.

Channel Four has already raised the alarm in a terrified establishment with a mention of the 'risks to children' from our Home Page!

Pretty good from the channel known for its filth!

The BNP is a happy to say it beat the Tories onto the Internet by several weeks. Their site has now opened - and is a total technical disaster! A flood of complaints have appeared on the Net from people whose computers crashed when trying to access it.

YOUR LETTERS

Write to: The Editor, British Nationalist, PO Box 117, Welling, Kent DA16 3DW

Sir:

In reporting on the Daily Express 'racism' opinion poll (September BN) I think you missed one very important snippet of the report.

Although the Express poll found that two thirds of Britons admit they are racist the Express goes further than that. I quote: '...there is also a widespread feeling that distrust and prejudice is on the increase'.

That is proven most dramatically with the answers to one of the questions asked, which suggested that nearly 90% are 'prejudiced' to some extent.

The Express asked: 'Thinking about the people you know, irrespective of what they say in public, do you think they are on the whole'

Very prejudiced (13%)
Quite prejudiced (32%)
A little prejudiced (44%)
Not at all prejudiced (11%)

Some items in the poll ostensibly contradicted others. While the above suggested that 89% are 'racially prejudiced' to some extent, this hardly makes sense against the result which found that '6 in 10 citizens would marry someone from another racial group, or let their son or daughter do so'.

It must be remembered that this 6 in 10 proportion does not apply exclusively to whites' preferences, but to an average cross section, including blacks, but even allowing for this fact, one is inclined to suspect that this result was falsified as a sop to the PC brigade.

Mr. R.D. Molesworth, Cheltenham, Gloucester

Sir:

Thank you for sending me information about the BNP.

Unfortunately I cannot join, as I have no money, being one of Britain's low paid impoverished workers who are allowed no benefits due to working more than 16 hours per week.

I give a brief breakdown of my monthly income/outgoings - but first let me say how much I agree with a lot of what you say.

Mortgage £186
Electricity, water, rates etc. £172.60
Shopping, food etc. £160
Total £518.60

My net income is £475 per month, with occasional overtime.

I have paid income tax and national insurance for 36 years, and find myself in this situation after my husband fell ill, following taking out a second mortgage, and clearing off with the money.

I am left with the mortgage on my home, which I owned before being married, and a part time job.

In BN you report that in Middlesbrough Asians are being advised about benefits they are not claiming. No one is helping me. My husband has been rehoused by the council on health grounds. I have been told to go into a hostel.

I am disgusted by how my country has let me down when I have paid all my working life to support it.

Keep up the good work. Your articles are excellent

Ms. S. Morgan, Aylesbury, Bucks

Sir:

We British patriots would like to know why a person whose parents were born in Jamaica should guard our monarch. (see recent media reports re black guardsman)

Mark Campbell may be a nice guy, but he is not British in my view, and the monarchy is surely the pinnacle of Britishness.

Sympathies for immigrants will flourish until enough liberal left types suffer a disadvantage from the situation. Whites will then quietly scrap the word 'racism'.

Let's hope it will not be too late.

Mr. R. Sollery, Ripon, N. Yorks

OUT AND ABOUT

EAST LONDON MEETING

National Organiser Richard Edmonds was the principal speaker at a very successful meeting held to launch the BNP's campaign in the Limehouse by-election - in which Tom Callow is our candidate.

About 50 attended the meeting, which was chaired by East London Organiser Dave King.

Mr. Edmonds said that the OJ Simpson case had confirmed all the BNP's warnings about what lies ahead without racial separatism. There was no justice in the US, and racial loyalty and money were now the factors which decided juries.

The party's National Organiser also spoke in Basingstoke during the month. The British people, he said, must take part in the democratic process on their own behalf. The BNP's 50 seat General Election initiative was vital to our progress, and should get every supporter's full backing.

ILFORD MEETING

Party Chairman John Tyndall spoke to an enthusiastic meeting of Redbridge Branch early in October. Mr. Tyndall said that the disastrous 20th. Century was almost at an end, and the coming years would witness a vast tide of white people fighting back against their destruction.

NEW WOKING PO BOX

Woking Unit has opened its own PO box, which is now listed in BN.

The unit also held a good meeting during October addressed by Elections Officer Eddy Butler, and Press Officer Michael Newland.

Sir:

The BNP has once again been featured in the Hereford Journal.

Note the changing tone. The first headlines about the BNP were full of strident condemnation. (September BN). The latest article (this issue) seems almost apologetic, even fearful.

I think we are getting the establishment very worried indeed.

Mr. J.B. Haycock, Bromyard, Herefordshire

Sir:

The BNP's appearance on the Internet is a breath of fresh air - perhaps a breakthrough.

I do not understand it fully, but my son and my daughter's boy friend grasped the implications and possibilities at once.

We must face the fact that most people do not now read much, but prefer to gawp at the 'telly'. So why not use it to our advantage!

This will show up the vile establishment media for what they are - but can they stop it in any way?

Mr. C. Farrer, Peterborough, Cambs.

Sir:

Some of the ads the ITV companies broadcast injure and disturb the underdeveloped viewer (eg. our youth) to such a degree, I feel, that everyday behaviour can often be judged the mere visible operation of the 'invisible' power that is television advertising.

An everyday situation: 'Teenage boy sees trendy young things in a TV advert playing soccer with a soft drink can, and noisily emulates them forgetting to discard can in litter bin'.

Mr. A. Lightfoot, Bridlington, E. Yorks

Sir:

When the BNP comes to power I just hope that our police forces are trebled in manpower so we can again see police in our streets doing the job of keeping law and order - we have none in our country at present.

When I go into Cambridge I play a game I invented. It's called 'spot the police officer' due to there being such a limited number!

Mr. S.J. Ryder, Cambridge

Bristol & South-West Unit set the pace

BRISTOL & SOUTH WEST BRANCH held its best meeting since our last edition. Thirty-five attended - most local. West Midlands Organiser Keith Axon (picture right) was the visiting speaker and emphasised the huge publicity which well organised events could earn. Hereford was an example (September BN and right).

BN Editor John Morse (picture left) then spoke, talking about the importance of the party's 50 seat campaign, and the plan announced at the outset of the meeting to fight a seat in Bristol. John also discussed the effect of international free markets on small business. The meeting, followed by a social, raised £250 for branch funds, and was chaired by Bristol Organiser Bruce Cowd (picture centre).

Bristol Branch also held a Day of Action on September 23. The branch held a paper sale and distributed 800 leaflets in Fishponds. Teams from around the region then joined local members in another paper sale in Kingswood Shopping Centre. Dozens of BNs were sold and hundreds more leaflets given to a very welcoming public.

A large part of Mangotsfield was then visited and 1,500 'Why Britain Detests The Tories' leaflets given out. In all 4,000 leaflets were distributed during the day.

CONDEMNATION CORNER

BNP 'becoming a nuisance'

THE British National Party is targeting city councillors in its national newsletter.

The newsletter, distributed to homes south of the river, carried an article published by the Hereford Journal after BNP activities in the area shocked the city during the summer.

Councillor John Newman told a meeting of Hereford City Council on Monday: "The back page seemed to refer to the councillors mentioned in the article as left-wingers."

"They also seemed to be hinting that I should join them in their political beliefs."

"I can tell you there is as much chance of that as me climbing Ben Nevis with a grand piano strapped to my back."

"I am neither left nor right wing. I do my best for the people in my ward irrespective of their politics."

Councillor Robin Andrews said the BNP was becoming a nuisance in the area.

Worrying

He said its presence was worrying and asked what MPs were doing to put a stop to BNP activities.

But town clerk Charles Willis said there was little that could be done as the BNP's publicity material was not illegal.

"It's a shame when organisations such as this are allowed to become enemies of free speech," said leader of the council David Short.

How the Hereford Journal reported on BNP activities recently (see letters). Note the claim that the BNP is an 'enemy of free speech'. Pretty good from parties which demand our closure!

EMERGENCY APPEAL TARGET NOW £4,367.00

Last month contributions to the special emergency appeal, launched in April by the British National Party, came to £5,226.00. This still leaves £4,367.00 still to be raised. Two very large donations made up the main portion of the money raised last month. We take this opportunity to especially thank the two donors for their generosity.

The party would like to thank all those others who have sent in contributions to the appeal. There is still, however, a long way to go.

For the future, all those sending in money should address it to: BNP General Fund, and post it to: c/o PO Box 117, Welling, Kent DA16 3DW. We draw everyone's attention to the rule that receipts are only sent for donations of £10 or over unless specifically requested, in which case an SAE would be appreciated.

Good poll result in Kirkby North Ward

THE very busy Ashfield BNP Branch scored a good result in the County Council by-election on October 19.

Candidate Garry Marshall, an ex-miner, and member of his local residents' association, won 5.6% of the vote in a low key campaign. The turnout was only 17% - reflecting the disillusionment of the electorate. Labour supporters are willing to vote, with their party on a roll at present, but most others will not even visit a polling station, such is the level of demoralisation.

The branch's candidacy in May's Council elections, together with this campaign, and much local leafletting, are steadily establishing the BNP presence in the area as a normal part of the local political scene. This is the approach which will win dividends in the longer term, and the branch is to stand in Ashfield constituency in the general election.

Well done Ashfield!

British National Party ANNUAL RALLY November 11 1995

Readers should know by now that the British National Party's Annual Rally is scheduled to be held on Saturday November 11, in the afternoon. For security reasons, we are not announcing the venue here, only to say that it will be somewhere in or near the London area. Among other speakers to be announced will be John Tyndall, Richard Edmonds, and Michael Newland.

Will all those wishing to attend please note this fact carefully. This year, and until further notice, there will be no publicly advertised assembly point for those wishing to come to the rally. All those attending are advised to ensure well beforehand to link up with regional travelling groups, who will be proceeding to the rally in parties that will meet up with rally stewards at assembly points, which will be disclosed at the very last moment only to leaders of these regional groups. This is in order to minimise the possibility of disruption of the rally by political opponents.

Those aware of how to get in touch with their regional organisers should do so immediately in order to be sure that they will be advised of regional assembly points for travelling.

Those not aware should telephone the new BNP Information Line (0374 454 893). If the telephone is not answered when they ring, they should leave their personal details, including addresses and telephone numbers (if any), and they will be contacted in due course by local representatives.

We strongly urge all those concerned to make these arrangements now in order to avoid last minute rushes which could impair the efficiency with which the rally is organised.
